CHAMBERS GLOBAL 2022

PRACTICE OVERVIEW

In 2011, as a manifestation of our firm's commitment to human rights, CDH set up a dedicated Pro Bono & Human Rights practice which has built a reputation as a leader in the field. Each year, our small but vibrant practice provides thousands of hours of pro bono assistance to numerous deserving individuals and organisations unable to pay for legal services.

In addition to running our own independent matters, our practice also draws on the wealth of knowledge and expertise in the firm's other practice areas, allowing us to offer a wide range of specialist pro bono legal services of the highest quality to a range of different clients. Because we believe our future as a nation lies in building and empowering communities, our practice also engages in human rights training, legal training and special project work. Every attorney in the firm is encouraged to make a contribution not only to the provision of pro bono legal services but also in rolling out our human rights-based special projects and initiatives.

OUR CLIENTS

Our practice offers a range of free legal services to both individuals and non-profit organisations (NPOs) as well as other entities engaged in human rights or public interest work.

OUR SERVICES

Assisting Vulnerable Individuals

Because we believe that ordinary individuals always matter, our practice dedicates significant time to assisting vulnerable and disadvantaged individuals to access the legal system and enforce their rights in deserving matters. These services range from the provision of advice to a full range of litigation services where appropriate.

High Impact/Public Interest Litigation

We also recognise that as a well-resourced firm, we are in a position to make a wider contribution to a society facing ever-increasing challenges through the pursuit of matters implicating issues of broader public interest. We accordingly dedicate resources to engaging in high impact and public interest litigation that has the potential to develop our law and change many lives for the better, often in partnership with other organisations.

Our practice has specialist expertise in the fields of constitutional and public law, migrant rights, access to information and a growing specialty in women's rights.

SPECIALIST FIELDS OF EXPERTISE

Our practice has specialist expertise in the fields of constitutional and public law, migrant rights, access to information and a growing specialty in women's rights.

HUMAN RIGHTS, PUBLIC INTEREST LAW AND CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

We have successfully litigated and participated in a number of high profile and precedent setting human rights and public interest law matters, including:

Rights to Basic Education

We represented the South African Human Rights Commission to act as an amicus curia in a precedent setting matter concerning the rights of undocumented learners to a basic education in which the Grahamstown High Court struck down exclusionary policies and decisions of the Department of Education that discriminated against undocumented children. The Court upheld the right of all children, regardless of status, to a right to education in terms of section 26 of the Constitution.

Land Rights

Our Cape Town practice has expertise in land rights and is assisting a number of vulnerable communities in the Western Cape to enforce their rights to land.

Migrant Law

We represented two brothers (the children of Angolan refugees) in a precedent setting matter that went all the way to the Supreme Court of Appeal, to enforce their rights to citizenship under section 4(3) of the Citizenship Act and are assisting a number of other similarly affected young people to enforce their section 4(3) rights.

Our practice also assists refugees, asylum seekers and undocumented migrants to enforce various other constitutional and statutory rights, including rights to various social services, health care services and to challenge unfairly discriminatory practices.

Access to Information

We have assisted with a number of high - profile access to information cases, including assisting the South African History Archives (SAHA) to obtain a copy of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission database from the Department of Justice after many years of struggle, and the Right to Know Campaign to challenge a decision not to disclose the names and places of National Key Points under the National Key Points Act.

Civil damages for sexual assault claim

Our Cape Town Practice is representing survivors of sexual assault to claim civil damages. An important component of the case is a constitutional challenge to provisions of the Prescription Act which place an unfair evidentiary burden on survivors by requiring them to prove why they did not launch proceedings sooner.

Human rights training/special projects

Our practice also conducts human rights training and other substantive project work.

We are actively involved with the National Schools Moot Court Competition which is a nationwide high school-level moot court competition. The competition is hosted and run by a non-profit initiative comprising various players whose aim is to facilitate access to legal education and to promote awareness of our Constitution and Bill of Rights.

Our practice, together with CDH's Knowledge Management team, has played an active role over the last few years in supporting the competition through the hosting of training seminars, participation in the adjudication of the competition and financial support through the provision of bursaries to the finalists.

Assisting NGOs and NPOs

Our Corporate and Commercial along with other practice areas also offer a wide range of specialist pro bono assistance to many NPOs and public benefit organisations and entities, including assistance with registration and other start up assistance; providing tax and employment law advice; assistance with the drafting of contracts; the provision of training; and dispute resolution.

Our clients include large established entities like the Adopt-a-School Foundation as well as a number of smaller community-based organisations.

Staffing clinics

Members of our firm and practice regularly assist in staffing various law clinics run and administered by ProBono.Org, including the Refugee Law Clinic, the Inner City Housing Clinic, the Master's and the High Court Help Desk.

"Cliffe Dekker Hofmeyr provides excellent advice and strategy, and follows through. The team is extremely knowledgeable."

"The firm has a strong multidisciplinary team that is extremely skilled and knowledgeable."
